You are a TEACHER

You always had a lot of time for the boy when he was at school.

You thought he could have made something of himself if he had been given another chance instead of being expelled.

You are a TEACHER

Your opinion is that the boy was possibly the worst student you have ever taught.

You would have put a lot of work into helping him with his exams but he never gave you the chance to.
You are a POLICE OFFICER

You think that everyone deserves another chance.

You believe that if the boy is sent to a detention centre he will meet lots of people who will be a bad influence on him.

You are a POLICE OFFICER

You have taken the boy in for questioning on a number of occasions

You are worried that he will soon move on to much more serious crimes.

You think a spell in a detention centre would teach him a lesson.
You are a SOCIAL WORKER

You've worked with the boy's family for a number of years.

You know he has had a hard time staying on the right side of the law but feel he could still be helped.

You don't think he should be sent away from his family.

---

You are a SOCIAL WORKER

You have tried hard to help the boy for several years but have now run out of ideas.

You are worried that his behaviour is having a bad effect on the rest of the family, especially his younger brothers.
You are a PARENT

You've struggled to keep your son out of trouble for a long time now.

You know he is out of control but don't want him to be sent away.

You are here to promise that you'll help him to change his ways.

You are a PARENT

You've struggled to keep your son out of trouble for a long time now.

You feel that you can't cope with him any longer.

You feel that you really need to spend your time making sure his brothers don't go the same way.
